5-Point Corner Gets Another Overhaul Job

Still another plan of routing traffic through the five-way "gunzel trap" at the intersection of Carson street, Cabrillo avenue, and Cravens avenue was put into operation by city crews this week.

Ultimate solution to the problem, according to City Manager George W. Stevens, was the installation of automatic traffic signals. Cost of the signals would be approximately $7600. In the meantime, street crews were repaving the raised guide lanes to allow motorists easier access to Cravens avenue.

Due to the erection at the five-point intersection are five mercury vapor lights, Stevens said. Part of the electrical equipment needed for the installation has already arrived in the city warehouse and as soon as the complete facilities are in hand they will be installed, Stevens reported.

Repaving of the lanes followed a recent meeting of 15 Cravens avenue business and professional men and members of the city traffic commission. The business people said that shoppers had complained to them about the blocking of the Cravens avenue entrance.

Moving of the asphalt curb-like traffic guides, originally and purposefully installed as a temporary measure, follows a plan of city officials to try out several suggested plans of traffic control in an attempt to find the most practical method. Permanent concrete curbs and raised islands eventually will be installed at the intersection, according to the city manager.

Understudy by Ralph Dorsey, traffic engineer for the City of Los Angeles one of the most-often copied engineers in the U. S., is a plan for routing traffic through the city's other five-point intersection at Border avenue, Cabrillo avenue, and 213th street, Stevens said.

One-Sided Love Drives Veteran To Grave's Edge

A tense and tragic love for the wife of his benefactor he knew must be unrequited led a 26-year-old war veteran to two attempts on his life here last Tuesday.

The young veteran, Hallet Wilkerson, was caught in his second attempt by Milan Johnson, with whom he makes his home at 8261 Bendewald road, Seaside Heights, as he attempted to end his life by inhaling gas.

Johnson arrived home to find Wilkerson in a closed room with the gas on and immediately called a doctor and Torrance police to whom Wilkerson said he had swallowed ten sleeping pills earlier in the day because he was "madly in love with Arlene" Johnson's wife. The pills, though, only made him groggy and gave him a headache, he said.

The Johnsons said they were aware of Wilkerson's affection for Mrs. Johnson and agreed with police that there is an explosive situation, but said he had been seriously injured in the war and they were attempting to make a home for him.

Torrance Bethel Activities

Preceding the last meeting of Torrance Bethel 50, International Order of Job's Daughters, Mrs. Rolive Bever opened her Eldorado avenue home for a 6:30 pot luck supper for the girls.

Assisting Mrs. Bever were Mrs. Kathleen Ritko and Job's Daughters committee.

During the Bethel meeting Mrs. Nellie Montague, deputy grand guardian, conducted a school of instruction, with Miss Pat Cleve, newly installed queen, presiding.

Announcement was made of the exemplification of the ritualistic work for the grand guardian during her official visit on February 7. The occasion will be marked by a joint meeting in Torrance Masonic Temple when members of Torrance, Gardena, and Lomita Bethels will be present. An important practice will be held at 1:00 p.m., Sunday, February 5. All officers and choir members of these Bethels are to be present.
